

Melinda Davis has served as the chief nursing officer at Eastern Oklahoma Medical Center, an 84-bed hospital in rural southeastern Oklahoma, for more than 11 years. During her 23 years at that organization, she has held positions in the OR, emergency department, women and children's health, infection control, case management and has served as interim CEO.

Davis holds an associate's degree in nursing from Carl Albert State College and a master's degree in nursing from Western Governor's University. She has national certification in Nursing Professional Development, and serves on two telehealth boards, the Arkansas-Oklahoma consortium and Telehealth Alliance of Oklahoma.

Davis is an AHA/HRET Senior Improvement Leader Fellow, and has led the staff of Eastern Oklahoma Medical Center in making significant strides in patient safety and quality improvement as part of the AHA/HRET HEN.